Presenter Biographies

Candice M. Kane, Ph.D., J.D.
National Youth Gang Center
Adjunct Staff

Candice M. Kane has worked on various policy, program and research projects related to gangs and gang crime for more than 20 years. Her work with University of Chicago Professor Irving Spergel on a gang intervention project in Chicago's Humboldt Park prompted Dr. Spergel to invite Dr. Kane to work as a senior member of a team formed to develop a gang suppression and intervention model (now known as the Office of Juvenile Justice and Delinquency Prevention Gang Model) in the late 1980's. That model affords gang youth involved in serious and violent crime opportunities to become productive citizens while holding them accountable for their behavior through the application of five strategies. Dr. Kane subsequently became the principal investigator for training and technical assistance when OJJDP funded the implementation and evaluation of the model at five sites. In that role Dr. Kane devised a training plan for the sites and, with colleagues, delivered training sessions, planned and conducted cluster conferences, developed technical assistance materials, and provided on-site support to the sites for the years they received funding from OJJDP. During this time she was also asked to work with the five SafeFutures sites OJJDP was funding to address gangs in their communities. When the National Youth Gang Center was funded to provide training and technical assistance to other cities funded to implement the OJJDP Gang Model, Dr. Kane was invited to be part of the NYGC team tasked with assisting these sites. While an adjunct of the NYGC Dr. Kane has had the opportunity to collaborate with Center staff on the development of the gang problem assessment and program implementation technical assistance manuals that are available at the NYGC website, and the design and delivery of training sessions lasting one to five days that reflect the experiences of the five initial sites, her own observations and research that has been completed since the model was developed. She has also teamed with staff of the National Youth Gang Center to provide training and technical assistance to federally funded Gang Free Schools, Gang Free Communities and Gang Reduction Project sites across the country as well as numerous cities that have used state, local and other resources to launch all or part of the Comprehensive Model.

In addition to her role as a technical assistance provider to the sites implementing the OJJDP Gang Model, Dr. Kane has been invited to present at numerous local, state, and national conferences on various topics related to gangs, gang problem assessment and gang program implementation. She has participated in the evaluation of the first five gang sites and taught a course on youth gangs at the University of Chicago. As director of the Illinois Criminal Justice Information Authority, Dr. Kane was involved in a number of studies and projects related to gang assessment and program development as well.

Since leaving the Authority Dr. Kane has joined the staff of the Chicago Project for Violence Prevention (CeaseFire) at the University of Illinois at Chicago where she holds the position of Chief Operating Officer. In that role she is responsible for policy and program development, implementation and compliance, budget forecasting and management and evaluation.

Dr. Kane holds a doctorate from Northwestern University and a law degree from Northern Illinois University.

Tim Daley
Criminal Justice Program Director
23rd Judicial District of Pennsylvania

Tim Daley is a graduate of Alvernia College, holding a degree in Criminal Justice Administration and a Pennsylvania Education Certificate. Mr. Daley is also the Vice President of New Century Solutions, a safety consulting firm. Tim's background includes 16 years with the Reading Police Department, having spent time as a supervising sergeant in Juvenile Investigations. He was the lead investigator in gang, graffiti and occult related offenses. Tim also was the Safe School Coordinator for the Reading School District, the 4th largest district in the State of Pennsylvania and the Safety Coordinator for the Chester County Intermediate Unit.

Mr. Daley has co-authored 2 books on crisis management which have sold over 200,000 copies nationwide. He also has testified before the United States Congress and the Pennsylvania House of Representatives. Tim has also lectured for college level education and has presented at several national conferences.

Edward P. Mulvey Ph.D.
Professor of Psychiatry and Director of Law and Psychiatry Program
Western Psychiatry Institute and Clinic
University of Pittsburgh, School of Medicine

Dr. Mulvey received his B.A. in Psychology from Yale University in 1973, and his Ph.D. in Community/ Clinical Psychology from the University of Virginia in 1982. He also did post-doctoral training in quantitative methods in criminal justice at Carnegie Mellon University. He has been at the University of Pittsburgh since 1983. Dr. Mulvey is a Fellow of both the American Psychological Association and the American Psychological Society, a recipient of a Faculty Scholar's Award from the William T. Grant Foundation, a member of two MacArthur Foundation Research Networks (one on Mental Health and the Law and another on Adolescent Development and Juvenile Justice), and a member of the Steering Committee for the National Science Foundation-funded National Consortium on Violence Research. His research has centered on issues related to the use of mental health treatment as a method of social control, primarily focused on how clinicians make judgments regarding the type of risk posed by adult mental patients and juvenile offenders.

Carol Schubert, MPH
Law and Psychiatry Research Department
Western Psychiatry Institute and Clinic
University of Pittsburgh, School of Medicine

Carol Schubert received her B.A. in Psychology and Theology from Wheeling Jesuit University and her master's degree from the University of Pittsburgh Graduate School of Public Health. She has worked in the Law & Psychiatry Research Department of WPIC since 1985.

Carol has served in various capacities on multiple studies over the years. She has worked with Dr. Mulvey on a series of studies focusing on the relationships between mental illness and violence. This series of studies culminated with the "Intensive Follow-up of Violent Patients" study, a groundbreaking project involving weekly interviews with a group of mentally ill subjects selected for their high potential for violence. She also served as project coordinator for the influential, multi-site "MacArthur Risk Assessment Study".

Errika Fearby Jones
Gang Free Schools and Communities (GFSC) Director
Pittsburgh Board of Education

Errika Jones is the Director of the Gang Free Schools and Communities Project for the Pittsburgh Board of Education, one of four such Department of Justice (DOJ) projects in the nation. The GFSC initiative is a collaborative strategy that focuses school district staff, law enforcement personnel, government officials, and community members on solutions to address gang violence. In addition, Ms. Jones has worked with the DOJ as a national trainer on the Comprehensive Gang Model, C-SPAN panelist discussing alternatives to gangs, and as a panelist for their national telecast “Preventing Gangs in Our Communities” series.

Earlier, Ms. Jones worked with Pittsburgh Mayor Tom Murphy as the city's youth policy director. There, she spearheaded Pittsburgh's Serious Juvenile Offender initiative, managed the curfew and truancy facility, presented legislation to the city council, and developed and implemented policies that affected young people in Pittsburgh.

Recently, Ms. Jones was appointed by Governor Ed Rendell as the vice chair of the Pennsylvania Commission on Crime and Delinquency. The Commission administers over $120 million a year in prevention, intervention and suppression initiatives across the state. She is the first African American and the first woman named as vice chair. She also serves as chair of the Commission's Evaluation Advisory Committee.
